

Hiking & Camping - 21st Century Style.

INSERT A The Jardine Juniper Trail. This is also a popular bicycle trail know to bicycle enthusiast. Describes a trail and shows a 3200 year old juniper tree in lush green Logan Canyon, in northernmost Utah. (Dorothy , you're not in Kansas anymore !)

INSERT B Dinosaur National Monument, Utah- "The Jones Hole Trail". Be prepared - summers are very hot, winters quite frigid. This long hike has a lot of solitude and beauty!

INSERTS C and D Black Canyon Of The Gunnison National Park. Trails vary considerably in how strenuous they are. These two pages have images of a very beautiful area - "Black Canyon of The Gunnison National Park". I give my impressions of the two rim roads, two of the four trails I hiked, and three different campsites. The locations of where the images were taken are listed on page 5.

INSERT E Goblin Valley, Utah. These strange rocks, near Hanksville, Utah, look haunting and appear almost lifelike.

(E2) High Country Hiking trails near Salt Lake City. These trails lead to beautiful alpine lakes.

INSERT F "City Of Rocks, Idaho". This is about a National Reserve in Idaho used by rock climbers as well as hikers. It is very hot in summer and quite chilly in winter. This page also mentions a desert park in Colorado, showing an image of a bizarre rock on the sidebar of the page .

INSERT G Price Canyon, Utah. These images are much better than the original ones on the webpage. I wanted to show the trail and describe the hike. The scenery is gorgeous! The campsite has, fortunately, not been spoiled yet by modern conveniences. It is primitive.

INSERT H "dinosaur.html"- This page has images taken near a primitive campsite that includes a nice trail in one of the quieter areas of "Dinosaur National Monument". For more on Dinosaur- go page 3 or 5.

INSERT I That's this page ! This ski image was taken in late December just a few miles from Snowbird Ski Resort in Little Cottonwood Canyon. It's near Salt Lake City, Utah. The area is very popular to both tourist and locals.
